The Conservation Professional's Guide to Working with People

Date, time: Tuesday 7 February, 1:00pm – 5:00pm

Cost: $45 (Book Provided)

Instructor: Dr. Scott Bonar

Dr. Scott Bonar is the Unit Leader of the USGS Arizona Cooperative Fish and Wildlife Research Unit. He has conducted award-winning natural resources work in natural resources programs of state and federal government, universities, and private industry for over twenty-seven years, authoring numerous publications and supervising over eighty employees. Dr. Bonar's seminar will cover a variety of aspects of working with people including: how to resolve conflict and defuse contentious situations, how to persuade people, how to negotiate, etc. Dr. Bonar's book and seminar are best described by a quote from Dr. Mamie Parker, assistant director, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Fisheries and habitat Conservation—"This book (seminar) is a guidepost and should be a part of the college curricula in every natural resources program. Scott Bonar's varied experiences working with people come through in a rich text filled with rhetoric and history, sociology and psychology, politics and planning. His is an applied and pragmatic approach proffered to guide biologists toward fulfilling careers in conservation."
